“ My first memory of Ralph, happened to be at Hardee's during morning hours. There was a bench seat (dubbed The Liar's Bench by Dick Monroe; jokingly of course), and certain regulars gathered there to converse over coffee. Ralph became one of the gang and was loved and respected by all. Those who knew Ralph cannot but miss his presence....I will.

“ I want to share a couple of stories about Ralph that make me smile. One day we were eating breakfast with Randy Harnish & Greg Starr. He wanted so badly to show us the East Chicago neighborhood where he grew up. " Just a day trip, you will love it." We never committed so he kept at it the next time we were together. We questioned how safe that would be going to places where other visitors don't go. "Oh, no worry, I know my way around." I finally said, "I'm not go'in if your not pack'in.....He looked at me with that serious look of his....."Douglas.....I'm always pack'in."

This fall he had a picture of his friend, Buddy, on facebook. They had served and worked together. Buddy lives in Florida but was vacationing in Afghanistan! I ask Ralph, "what in the world is Buddy doing in Afghanistan?" "I think I told you, I know I told you, Doug.....Buddies crazy Doug!"

I wish everyone could know the Ralph Garcia I knew. We went from being acquaintances to friends to best friends. I got to know him well, some of my friends got to know him well, my kids got to know him well. They pretty liberal, he pretty conservative. They respected and loved him. My daughter, Ti, who lives and works in the land of liberalism, Hollywood, still has the newspaper article announcing his book on her refrigerator. After she met Ralph she started attending Memorial Day services at Los Angeles National Cemetery. She does that every year and now takes friends with her. She does that to not only honor those who died but also to honor her friend, Ralph Garcia. He was proud of her for doing that, she, just as proud to do it. She was devastated at the news of his passing.....pretty amazing they would have that bond, so far apart, so different in age, so different in political views.

He was known for his military service, CIA work and also his leadership of a political party. He was less known for maybe his most important attribute.....an ability and a drive to help others which he did over and over, month after month, year after year. He saw kids in need so he took it upon himself to help start the local boys and girls club, not to make a name for himself in his new community but because he knew how much that would have meant to him if there had been one where he grew up. Vietnam veterans deserving recognition and needing help....he stepped up and helped in starting the local Vietnam Veterans of America chapter. Hispanic families struggling and their kids in desperate need of a role model, needing encouragement to achieve more than they ever dreamed they could do. He told his story, a story like they were living, and, they could do it just like he did it. He changed lives. Those currently in the military got a care package from him because he knew how much that would have meant to him when he was serving in some lonely place on the other side of the world. For those who had experienced a loss or terrible tragedy, especially if they were military or had a military connection, he was there. A lot of people do this initially, but very few go back...he went back. He didn't forget and he made sure they knew he didn't forget. There will be those at his service who will know exactly what I am talking about because they experienced it firsthand.

He was a smart man, he knew how to get things done, he demanded answers, he offended some, he was caring, he helped so many.....and it all came from his heart. A patriot, a proud Marine who served in war, an honored CIA agent who served around the world.....in the end, all wrapped up in a red, white and blue package. I've never been prouder to know someone in my life. He was the real deal and one hell of a guy.

“ *Ralph and I served on the Congressional Academy Nominations Committee for many years. I always looked forward to seeing him on Interview Day each year. One of my favorite memories of Ralph occurred on an Interview Day a few years back. We were used to seeing Ralph arrive, dressed very smartly, in a sharp suit each year. One year, however, Ralph showed up wearing a very Christmasy hand-painted sweatshirt with a Christmas tree! He loved his shirt and was very proud to show it off. I believe he said it was made for him by a daughter or grandchild(???). Anyhow, as our very anxious young interview candidates walked in the door, the first person they saw was Ralph in his happy sweatshirt. You could actually see them physically relax as they met this nice man. He reminded them of a friendly grandfather. That interview year became known as the "Year of Ralph's Christmas Tree". It was one of our best because Ralph was so good at putting the kids at ease. I will miss Ralph very much, and send my deepest condolences to all of his families and friends. Ralph was a national treasure, and he will be so missed...

“ You will be missed by many my friend, we have a saying in law enforcement "good people" says it all about Ralph he was good people, all around. A good husband, father, grand father, brother, son and to Me a partner in law enforcement, when Ralph had your back you never had to worry, he would have given his life for me and I for him, I'm sure he was the same in his military career. “ Ralph will be missed by so many people who will all have something special that stands out. Ralph as most know was a little ornery at times and liked to tell a good story. Mine begins with him telling me about a boy who had a name of Joe Fartenhouser and he decided he wanted to change his name. He went to the Judge for this to happen. The Judge wanted to know his name and after telling him the Judge said I understand, but what do you want to change it to? The boy replied "Willey" which blindsided the Judge. Why would you want to change it to Willey he asked. Because every time anyone sees me they always ask "Hey Joe what do you know?" Every time Ralph would see me it was always "Hey Joe what do you know?" It was a lame story but I looked forward to hearing it from him. Thanks for your service to our country Ralph!
