“ Zina, the time I have spent with you will always be cherished. There was days you was the extra push I needed and other days you was the shoulder to cry on. The last hug we shared will always be my favorite, I didn't think you was ever going to let me go. Rest Easy my dearest Zina, til we meet again.

“ Aunty. You were always who I looked up to as a child. You were the one who taught me that it was okay to be different. You gave me the nickname that I still go by, Wednesday because I was always into your weird creepy things too. I wish we would have had more time together and that you would have gotten to meet my babies. I still can't believe you're gone. I hate the way our last conversation was. But instead I will remember the good. The way I looked up to you. I miss you horribly.

“ I am one of many that is still in a state of shock on Zina's passing. Having worked with Zina and becoming the Burrito Queen (the nice version) by her choice. I tried quitting so many times but Zina always talked me into staying. You will definitely be missed for sure.

“ Dear sweet Zina, I met you when you were a new-born babe, and when I last saw you, I think you were about 13. But I have good memories of you. You had the prettiest blue eyes and blonde hair! Your Uncle Dan and I got married on July 15, 1961. We lived for two months in Ukiah. I remember one day I got to keep you! I took you outside when I was hanging clothes on the clothesline. You helped me hang them up by trying to hand them and the clothes pins to me. You were just a year old and walking. I thought you were so smart. Then, I remember the times when our families would get together while you were growing up. You had several cousins to see and play with. Jamie and Jody and Darren all got to see you on holiday occasions when we got together at Grandpa and Grandma Daskam's place in Oakland, when you saw Becky and Tonya, Lance, and Andrea. Your brothers, Mike and Tim were there. Your aunts and uncles. Cliff and Mary, Duane and Vicki, Ken and Mary Ellen, and me, Aunt Joan and Uncle Dan. Kenny, jr, a cousin, was also there. Fun times with all the family. These are my memories, and seeing you in photos helps me remember you. After you grew up, I heard you got married, and then had your son. I was very happy for you. I heard that you believed in God and had become a Christian! The happiest news of all. We will be together again, with others who have died before us. Our Darren and Dan are waiting for us, as well as others in the family. I am so sorry your life was so short. I hope you had many good times. I know you loved your mom very much. All pain is now gone, and I know you are resting in Heaven with Jesus. We will see you again some day. Until then, I will continue to hold you in my heart with love. Aunt Joan

“ Zina taught me everything I need to know about being a leader. We had a great team back in the day. I enjoyed our times together. Until we meet again, old friend. Rest In Peace. ”
